Son Of Late Dean Receives Memorial Scholarship Award

Ian Norton MacKay Given First Bursary From Fund

DONATIONS SOLICITED

Subscription List Includes Graduates Residing In All Parts Of World

Although the full amount for the scholarship established in the memory of the late Dean Henry Martyn MacKay has not yet been obtained, the committee in charge of the scholarship has decided to utilize the income from funds at present available and has awarded a scholarship for the current session to Ian Norton MacKay, the son of the late Dean, who has entered the first year course in the Faculty of Engineering.

The movement to establish this scholarship was set on foot last year with the view in mind to perpetuate the name of Dean MacKay. It was felt that such a memorial would be most appropriate in consideration of the brilliant scholarly attainments of Dr. MacKay who was Dean of the Faculty of Applied Science from 1932 until his death in October, 1930.

$10,000 Required

It was the aim of the Committee to secure sufficient funds for the endowment of two or more scholarships, for which it was estimated that a minimum sum of $10,000 would be required. To date, a sum of $3,000 has been invested, and it is hoped that this will be augmented by additional subscriptions during the current session, so that the scholarship may be established on a definite basis for the session 1932-33.

The committee feels that this memorial will have the whole-hearted support of the graduates of the Faculty, and of the host of friends of the late Dean in all walks of life. No limit either way is suggested as to the amount of individual subscriptions, and the committee wishes everyone to feel perfectly free to determine this for himself.

Many Donations

The list of subscribers to date contains the names of many who were not graduates of the Faculty of Engineering, and donations have been received from all parts of the world. Subscriptions should be made payable to the H. M. MacKay Memorial Fund, and be forwarded to the Honorary-Treasurer of the Fund, Engineering Building, McGill University.

New York McGill Graduates Gather

Elected Officers And Governors For Coming Season

(Special to McGill Daily by Resident Staff Correspondent)

New York, Nov. 16. — A modest gathering of McGill graduates, which included some of the oldest and some of the most recent men to hold degrees from the University, met last evening in the Fraternity Clubs' building, 22 East 38th Street. The occasion was the annual meeting of the New York branch of the Graduates' Society. Officers and governors for the year were elected.

E. J. McIvor was re-elected president, with Dr. W. Cameron Bailey as first vice-president. C. W. Ryan, N. T. Binks, and J. L. Roy were re-elected to the offices of second vice-president, secretary and treasurer, respectively. Dr. C. W. Price, E. A. Charlton, and Dr. C. K. Church were elected to the governing board.

Announcement was made of an intercollegiate smoker to be held on December 1st in the new rooms of the Canadian Club at the new Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. The principal speaker on that occasion will be J. L. Campbell, British Consul-General for the United States. A graduate of the Royal Military College will act as master of ceremonies.

Means by which the present membership, which is listed at about 90, may be made to participate, more actively in the activities of the Society, were discussed, and a number of plans were suggested.

In the absence of the president, Dr. W. Reid Blair, a past president, acted as chairman.

Engineers' Frolic

Tenders will be received for orchestras for the Engineers' Frolic, which will be held on New Year's Eve. All tenders should be in the hands of Harry Grimsdale in the Engineering Bldg. before November 21.

THEORY OF EXPANSION OF SPACE DISCREDITED

Proof Advanced That Universe Is Not Infinite

Dr. de Sitter Discusses Various Phases Of Topic

"IT has lately been discovered that the stars possess a rotatory motion, and in order to keep them from flying off at a tangent, there must be a force drawing them towards the centre of the globular stars," stated Dr. Willem de Sitter in the course of his lecture on "The Size of the Universe," at a joint meeting of the Sigma XI Society and the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada, held last night in the MacDonald Physics Building. The speaker was introduced by Dr. F. E. Lloyd, president of the Sigma XI.

Dr. de Sitter opened his lecture by advancing Archimide's proof that the universe is finite, and then led up to the two modern theories which have been formulated. There are two approaches to the problem. In the first of these the method of approach is from within, and the second is from without, the Galactic System. The great principle employed is that of statistical astronomy, in which a model of the system can be constructed, and the density of stars per unit volume calculated.

Subject of Investigation.

About 15 years ago the Globular Star Structure became the subject of intensive investigation, and individual models made in order to study them. It was then decided to combine the two methods of investigation, and regard our own system as similar to the spiral nebulae when regarded from without, and to the globular stars when regarded from within.

The force of attraction becomes greater as the centre is approached, and shows the necessary accumulation of large quantities of matter there. This matter has not yet been seen, but with the introduction of more powerful telescopes this problem will be solved.

Will Double in Size.

The theory of the expansibility of space is based on the Doppler's principle. According to this light from a receding object is fainter than that from an approaching body. Since the light of stars varies in this way, it is assumed that the universe is expanding, and in fourteen and a half million years will be double its present size.

There have been two new solutions of the equation about the expansibility of space advanced, and in both of these the universe is considered as finite. In the first, there is a definite amount of matter present, so that expansion takes into account

Sir Arthur Has Enthusiasm For Exhibition Trip

"CANADA, as the nearest British Dominion to the B.W.I., must take a larger interest in trade with those islands," declared Sir Arthur Currie in an interview on the forthcoming Canadian Trade Exhibition Cruise in January.

In the past, Canada has come through all difficulty, and it is Sir Arthur's belief that she will come through this depression. It is up to all Canadian enterprise to take part in this venture, and to see that Canada takes the opportunity that will undoubtedly be offered.

Modern Physical Theories Contain Permanent Value

Dr. Willem de Sitter Expresses Opinion On Relativity

THAT the present development of physical theory will, despite some changes, prevail and that the physicists are on the right track was the opinion of Professor Willem de Sitter, internationally known astrophysicist of Leyden University, Holland when interviewed by the Daily yesterday.

A tall, sparsely built, elderly man with a white Van Dyke, Dr. de Sitter impresses one greatly with a sense of quiet power and broad knowledge. The interview took place at the home of Dr. A. V. Douglas of the McGill Physics Department.

"Detailed interpretation of certain phases may change in course of time but the principle of relativity and the concept of space-time are 'here to stay'" was the reply of Professor de Sitter to the interviewer's query as to how he regards the Theory of Relativity. Among the more important developments in recent physical theory are Cosmic Rays on which Dr. Robert Millikan has done significant work.

Professor de Sitter also thinks that the theory of the nature of light will necessarily be some modification of a combined wave-corpuscle theory. However, he emphasized that the term corpuscle is not to be taken in the sense used two or three hundred years ago. He also stressed the fact that the present is a transitory period in the physical sciences as regards fundamental theories.

At the close of the interview, Dr. de Sitter added that he believes that the people on this continent think more deeply than they are ordinarily given credit for in Europe.

New Social Order To Be Considered

Paul Porter Will Speak Before Labour Club

The McGill Labour Club, a campus organization of several years' standing dedicated to a study of labour problems and the economic and political labour movements, is starting its season's activities next Monday night, November 23, with a lecture by Mr. Paul Porter of New York, secretary of the League for Industrial Democracy. This lecture will be held in the Strathcona Hall at 8.15 p.m., the subject of which will be "Students in a Changing World" or "The Challenge of a New Social Order."

Mr. Porter is a graduate of the University of Kansas where he achieved distinction as a debater, editor of the University daily and of an independent journal—The Dove, and president of the student Y.M.C.A. He has just returned from an extensive trip in Europe and Asia and is now engaged in a speaking tour at prominent universities in the United States and Canada.

In addition to his lecture in Strathcona Hall, Mr. Porter will also speak at the Central Y.M.C.A. Auditorium on Tuesday night, November 24, on "The Conflict in Manchuria." The Executives of the Labour Club, invite all members and others who are interested to be present at these lectures.

Arts '32 Biographies

Arts '32 students are reminded that biography forms for the Annual are now obtainable from Bill Gentleman in the Arts Building. They are urged to fill these out as soon as possible and to return them to Bill Gentleman's office.

Prize Values To Be Announced By Students' Society

ANNOUNCEMENT of the value of the cash awards to be given in the McGill Annual-Daily Competition which came into effect yesterday will be made at a meeting of the Students' Society tonight. The contest will continue until Jan. 15th when all entries will come under the consideration of a committee of judges.

The competition, based on the same principles as the American Pulitzer Prize Competition, offers the opportunity of gaining some award to students in general, as well as to members of the Daily Staff. A prize is being offered for the best editorial, the best news story, the best feature, the best short story and the best poem written during the given period.

To Have Co-Eds In Union Grill Room?

Would Help Greatly In Present Economic Situation

PRICES REDUCED

John Loup, Manager of Cafeteria, Notes Decrease In Customers

"The young ladies should be permitted the use of the grillroom, in order to help out in the present situation", stated John Loup when interviewed about the condition of the Cafeteria. "The Cafeteria should be regarded by the students as a necessity and not as a convenience, as so many do at the present time", he continued.

The financial condition of the Cafeteria is in a bad way, according to Mr. Loup, though exactly how bad it is, he cannot say. The food is catered by Cordner's and everything is attended to by them, so that an exact statement is not obtainable at present. There has been a notable decrease in the number of students patronizing the Cafeteria this year. For a period of 30 days this year, as compared with the same time last year, there has been a decrease of over 2,000 in the number of patrons.

Prices Cut

The prices, too have been greatly cut, and in a number of cases this amounts to a reduction of 35 percent of last year's prices. Added to this the Cafeteria is open each day, for a shorter period than in previous years. In spite of this the management is still successful in maintaining the high standard of food which is served there. The decrease in patronage is apparent not only in the Cafeteria but is reflected in all departments of the Union.

The management is at a loss to account for the alarming rate at which attendance at the Cafeteria is falling off. Students would apparently rather go elsewhere and pay more, merely to obtain better service, though poorer food, than at the Cafeteria. In view of the present situation the manager invites suggestions and comments from anyone who should care to help him.

'Planes Influence Troop Movements

Aerial Side Of Recent Manoeuvres Discussed

"Before making any movement of land forces, an officer must take into consideration the air strength of his enemy", was the advice offered by Captain Spooner, during his address to the members of the McGill C.O.T.C. in the Engineering Building yesterday afternoon. This meeting was held in order that the corps might hear how the recent manoeuvers at St. Margaret's looked from the air.

Captain Spooner, with the aid of a map of the district, showed how he led his detachement of four planes throughout the action. For the first part of the action they were the chief scout of the defenders. Descending from the altitude of 2,500 to 1,500 feet he pursued a course from the South West to North East. Their objective was to locate the advance guard of the approaching force, form an estimate of their strength, and then inform headquarters.

Captain Spooner argued that in actual war-fare the planes that would be used in reconnaissance work carried large cameras. The negatives were rushed back to the base where they would be rapidly developed and studied by experts.

Major Buchanan, in thanking the speaker, pointed out that the chief lessons learned by the recent action was the importance of cover from the air, and the absolute need of rapid execution of messages from scouts.

Societe Francaise Meeting

Charades presented by the various years will feature the second meeting of the Societe Francaise which takes place Thursday at four o'clock in the Common Room of R.V.C. Each charade will be judged according to acting, general presentation and clearness of portrayal. The executive emphasizes the fact that attendance at the meeting does not necessitate an extensive knowledge of French.

Noted Pianist Gives Appreciated Recital

Hungarian Music Received Fine Interpretation

Paul de Marky has once again shown that he is an excellent pianist and a real musician. His recital Saturday afternoon in Tudor Hall was given before a large audience who fully appreciated his program.

The numbers in general were somewhat pedantic — musically — but excellent interpretation gave them special interest. In particular must be mentioned an unannounced group of Hungarian songs adapted from the piano by Vuttkay. These were of the characteristic national music, played with good feeling, and were the high spots of the concert. Two other numbers worthy of mention are the Naila Waltz by Delibes-Donnanyi, and the Funeral March Movement from Chopin's Sonata in B flat minor, two well known melodies excellently interpreted.

Mr. de Marky, who incidentally teaches at the Conservatorium, has two characteristic techniques, available at will, and capable of merging to some degree. One is majestic, tending to heaviness and the resulting muddle of notes, and the other is extremely light, allowing each note to be heard as clearly as a bell. This permits the pianist a wider range of compositions, well performed, than the usual artist. In addition Mr. de Marky carries himself with a simple grace that is just as effective as the most violent head tossings of "temperamental" performers.

Progress Shown In Players' Club Dress Rehearsal

Cornell Stresses Need For Increased Sales Of Tickets

SUPPORT NECESSARY

Play Starts Four-Show Run This Thursday Night In Moyse Hall

Moyse Hall was the scene of considerable hustling and bustling until a very late hour last night as "Morn till Midnight" went through its first dress-rehearsal. Every scene was played once, and several were run off twice.

When interviewed, Cecil West, the supervisor, stated that the play as a whole showed a marked improvement over previous rehearsals, and said that generally speaking he was fairly satisfied with the efforts of those concerned. There is still a certain number of properties to arrive, and there is one more dress rehearsal before the play opens on Thursday night, so that all the ragged edges have time to be tucked out of sight.

To Increase Publicity

Dean Cornell, who is in charge of the sale of tickets, gave a brief resume of the state of affairs in that direction. He said that to date, sales had not been very encouraging, but that the publicity was going to be greatly increased in the next three days, and that if all those taking part in the production would try to sell some tickets, they would help out to a considerable extent. Cornell also stressed the fact that if this play does not at least pay for itself, the Students' Council will not advance funds for a second production.

As compared with the last production, the "Beggar on Horseback", the new play is fairly easy on the stage crew, as there are less than ten changes of scene, whereas there were nineteen in the former one. The cast is composed of about forty people, comprising all types of humanity, from southern adventuresses to hardened old sinners in a Salvation Army hostel, and from bankers to race-track gamblers.

Action Is Rapid

Variety is not lacking in this play; events take place in rapid sequence, the scene jumping here and there until a climax which is startling, stark, and sordid is reached.

As can easily be seen from the above, those in charge of the costuming and make-up involved have had a task of no mean proportions on their hands, but as Cecil West said, things are shaping up pretty well so far.

Cercle Francais To Hear Debate

Will Argue Merits Of Apartment Houses

A debate will be the feature attraction of the Cercle Francais which will meet at 8.00 p.m. tonight in the Union Grill Room. The subject will be "Resolved that apartment houses are preferable to private residences." Fred Knowles, Com. '33 and Bud Coolican, Ap. Sc. '33 will uphold the affirmative, while those speaking for the negative are Rene Cazun, Com. '34, and W. L. Barnes, Com. '33.

Following the debate, those present will have an opportunity of practising their French by taking part in the discussion. All students interested in French are especially invited to attend. An advanced knowledge of the language is by no means essential. It is hoped that a large gathering will be present as the Cercle's plans for the year will be considered.

The Cercle Francais is one of the oldest clubs on the Campus. Its meetings consist of debates, impromptu speeches and talks given by outside speakers, or by McGill professors. The Cercle has only male students for members but meetings are generally held each year in conjunction with the Societe Francaise, its sister organization in this University.

Manchurian Crisis To Be Considered

Ex-Japanese Resident Will Address Club

SUBJECT PERTINENT

Speaker Spent 16 Years In Japan—Government and Press Connections

The League of Nations Club of McGill will hold a meeting at Strathcona Hall on Thursday the 19th of November at 8.30 o'clock. Mr. Phelps, B.A. of Yale, will give an address on "The Manchurian Situation." Mr. Phelps who has lived in Japan for sixteen years is qualified to handle this complicated question as he has been connected with press and governmental circles in the country which has been the centre of world interest for the past month.

"If one considers that at present the governments of all the great nations are sincerely working out plans for the coming disarmament conference in London, and that at the same time a major nation is at war with a minor power, the outlook must needs be a pessimistic one.

Something Wrong

"If it is possible that a devastating war is being waged in one part of the world, while at the other hand supposedly representative statesmen of the different countries are talking of peace, then there must be something fundamentally wrong with the institution which enables these men to come together," is the opinion of the Executive of the Club.

"Although the members and friends of the League of Nations Club have always endeavoured to interpret the aims and objects of the league of nations with a sympathetic view, the time has come where this sympathetic view will have to be tempered by a spirit of intelligent criticism. The subject "Manchurian Situation" is well fitted to supply a basis for a critical discussion of the whole problem of international conciliation coupled with the need for disarmament and the necessity of security stated the president."

Current Politics.

It is therefore hoped that all students and others interested in the Manchurian Question in particular and in the problems of current international politics in general will attend this meeting and take part in the discussion which follows the subject of the evening.

Arts '34 Selects Scarlet Key Men

Gathering Discusses Possibility Of Holding Luncheon

A large crowd was on hand at 1 o'clock yesterday in the smoking room of the Arts Building to transact the business of Arts '34. The main reason for the meeting was the nomination of representatives for the Scarlet Key Society. From class B two nominees are to be elected on November 27.

The necessary names of ten Arts '34 undergrads were affixed to the following three men: Bert Denton, Gordon McQuat, and William Tait. Further business discussed included the possibility of holding a class luncheon, but no decision was reached. All those interested in basketball were urged to turn out for the class team.

Junior Prom

The tickets to the Junior Prom are on sale now, and Juniors have the option until November 23 to obtain these. After this date the tickets will be on sale to the student body in general. The Prom will be held on Friday, December 4, in the Windsor Hotel.

Sincere Evidence From Physicians Urged By Judge

Dealt With The Appearance Of The Practitioner In Court

CITES EXAMPLES

Mr. Justice Hall Addressed Meeting Of Medical Society Last Night

"The primary duty of the doctor is to testify frankly and sincerely as to what he knows." This was the main theme of the address delivered last evening at the meeting of the McGill Medical Society by Mr. Justice Hall of the Court of Appeals. Judge Hall's subject was "The Doctor and the Law."

The speaker's main topic was chiefly concerned with the participation of the medical man in the execution of justice, more particularly with the appearance of the ordinary practitioner in the courts of law. Mention was made of the various instances in which the physician may be called upon to testify.

Professioinal Privilege

Mr. Hall discussed the question of professional privilege, drawing the contrast between the Quebec and the English laws in this regard. In the latter country, the doctor may be obliged to give evidence not only in criminal cases but also in civil cases; whereas in the province of Quebec he can only be forced to give testimony in civil cases, the principle being that the public interest in criminal cases transcends the private interests of the ligitants in civil cases.

Simple Language.

The speaker urged that the physician have a clear idea of what the problem is about, and that he use simple language in his evidence. Furthermore the doctor should remember that he is not merely a witness on a question of fact but also an expert witness on a question of opinion. Medical experts have often been criticized for their inclination to support their patient's viewpoint to the disregard of the actual facts of the case. Mr. Hall cited many amusing anecdotes illustrative of his statements.

Various business matters were dealt with, among which was the report of the chairman of the insignia committee. The case report was presented and discussed by members present, different diagnoses being volunteered. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

Canada Will Find Tariff Necessary

Freshman-Sophomore Debating Society Holds Meeting

Canada is a young country rich in natural resources, but lacking the people to exploit them; her industries must be protected against foreign dumping until her population increases", said F. Cleland, speaking at a debate on the subject "Resolved that the protective tariffs are in the best economic interests of Canada." This meeting, sponsored by the Freshman-Sophomore Debating Society, was held in the Music Room of the Union yesterday afternoon. The decision was rendered in favour of the negative side.

The speaker went on to say that without a tariff Canada will be swamped with the product of cheap labour and mass production of foreign countries. A tariff is necessary to create a balance between cost of production in Canada and the cost of foreign goods until she is able to compete on an equal basis with other countries. It is important to distinguish between a tariff on foreign goods for the purpose of raising a revenue and a tariff for protection of home industries.

M. Boxer, speaking for the negative, said that protection enables producers to use obsolete machinery and methods, because they do not have to enter the arena of international competition. The only reason the United States has prospered to such an extent is that it has had open trade doors for France, England, Central and South America. No country is self-sufficient. To sell Canada must first buy. "Tariff protection at such a time of depression as the present one is morally wrong".

Women In The Union?

Current rumours on the Campus about the proposal to establish a table service in the Grill Room of the Union for the benefit of students who do not relish the idea of waiting on themselves at lunch hour deserves the attention of the student body as a whole, and of the co-eds in particular. Under the plan, as the rumour carries it, women will be admitted to the Grill Room; at present they cannot enter the cafeteria.

As conditions are now the usual lunch hour at one o'clock each day sees a straggling line of men wating to be served. The average time it takes to serve these students is about fifteen minutes, so that those men who have to return to lectures by two o'clock are forced to have a hurried meal. As may be expected these students do not relish the idea of eating in the Union. A table service would facilitate matters a great deal.

The co-eds, we are sure, will welcome the idea. Instead of having to hurry downtown to partake of a hurried lunch and then having to rush back to the different buildings, they will be able to obtain a good meal within a few minutes walk from the University.

The duplication of service in the Union Cafeteria will probably cause a drop in prices on the menu. This is quite consistent with the high quality of the food now being served. In any event it is bound to be approved by the student body in general.

The admission of women to the Students' Society last year will now be carried forward a step. Instead of only visiting the Union for the purpose of going to the Players' Club, the Daily office or the Red and White Revue office, the women will now be able to go there for lunch daily.

That such a service is necessary is evident. Last year, the S.C.A. started a table service for men and women and according to reports it proved to be a success. This year nothing as yet has been done, and should this rumour materialize, then both the students and the Union House executive will profit by it.

It must not be forgotten, however, that to date it is only rumour. A question such as this will have to be brought up before the Students' Council, and will have to be approved by them and the students. Opinions on this subject will be welcome and may be expressed through the medium of the daily Correspondence columns.

Is It Possible?

For the last few years at McGill, there has been a gradually growing display of disinterestedness in affairs in general on the Campus. Most organizations have their examples of lack of interest, but in the majority of cases, these are few and far between, and rarely, if ever, have serious consequences. But a survey of matters here gvie reason for alarm.

In the first place, there is the "Literary situation," as it might be termed. In the past, several attempts have been made at starting a magazine edited solely by the students, to provide a medium for student literary expression. The most recent of these failures was the "McGilliad," which fell through because of the lack of student support. Several days ago the Medical Undergraduate Journal made its appearance, and now the students of the Faculty of Engineering are planning to start one of their own.

The efforts of the students in Medicine are laudable; the plans of the men in Science are no less so. But the question arises, "Why could not these enthusiastic journalists contribute their talent to a magazine that would represent the university as a whole, a central magazine, as it were?" Not only would it speak well for this institution, but the students would mutually benefit. If necessary, the journal could have exclusive sections for the different faculties.

Briefly, the situation is paradoxical; a scheme for a magazine representative of the entire university has fallen through, and immediately on its heels come the attempts of faculty journals. There is only one explanation for this, and that is the general lackadaisical feeling on the Campus.

This feeling has also made its pernicious influence felt in the realm of student government. At the first meeting of the Students' Society the executive found it impossible to muster a quorum of 100, out of a total enrollment of 3,000. This is a most staggering fact, and yet, the second time that body convened, the attendance was not much larger, and McGill prides herself on her system of self government, giving the students almost full power to manage their own affairs. So far, they have not given indication of much ability in this direction.

The crisis at which many clubs on the Campus find themselves, the urgent demand made by them for more and better support, and the feeble reply to their frantic requests, show the student attitude.

We do not offer any solution, we do not ask for better support of these societies, we merely present these facts with the query, "Is it possible that this should exist at McGill?"

Cenderama and the Big Ogre

The following bids fair to be a most remarkable allegory. \+ \+ \+

Once upon a time five strange looking characters were walking down St. Catherine St. The first was a young foreigner carrying a violin, a description of whom I leave to my distinguished confrere Musicus. He can do whatever he wants with him. I leave him severely alone. The second was a tall, thin, long grey-haired gentleman reading a book. On his back he carried a but more of what he carried later. He answered to the name of Mose Rhymer. The third character somewhat resembled Mose Rhymer, but he was not so tall, nor his hair so long. His name happened to be Mose Dauber. The fourth was a bleak woman with a red nose and a sniff. She came from the west and made everybody call her Jean Yuss by always looking dirty.

And now we come to the fifth. It was a poor sexless creature, who had fallen on a sawmill in its childhood and lost its right side so that it only had one arm, one leg, and half a head and body. Poor little Cinderama! The only way it could eke out an existence was by clinging to the back of Mose Rhymer, a tolerant man.

As they were proceeding down St. Catherine St. they came to a large building where dwelt an Ogre all dressed up in tweeds. This ogre had a huge telescope through which he was wont to survey the countryside every Saturday in order to register his pleasure for everything he saw which wore tweeds also. Even his retinue of typewriters had tweed covers. Moreover every "r" had been removed from their keyboards.

But today he was gloomy. Everything was in smooth worsted. Said the ogre, "I must smile or I will lose my public". On spying the procession coming down the street he had them surrounded and brought before him to be commanded as follows: "Amuse me or I will throw you into the waste-paper basket!" The five trembled and said, "We will try, oh ogre, but be not harsh with our poor efforts."

The first to attempt was Jean Yuss, for she was indeed a strong-minded female. Dressed in black silk, she hied her to prairie farm where she murdered all the homesteaders including the neighbouring prostitute, all the cattle and the old grandmother, taking copious notes the while. But the ogre looked through his telescope and frowned. He did not like black silk and quite abhorred prostitutes. So when Jean Yuss returned with her story, the ogre said, "LOUSY", and promptly threw her into the waste-paper basket.

Then it was Mose Dauber's turn, and he, nothing daunted, donned a suit of Quebec homespun, bought at a handicraft exhibit, and journeyed to the north shore of Lake Superior where he set up an easle and dumped paint all over the landscape. Returning with several rocks, a toy cottage, and the branches of a wind-swept pine tree, he was met by the irate ogre with the words, "Don't you know I loath homespun, and turn sick at the sight of wind-swept pine trees LOUSY!" And he too found his way into the waste-paper basket.

Now Mose Rhymer was a wise man, so when he saw the fate of the others, he took a look around the room to see what the ogre's tastes in literature were. Then he scampered over to Henry Morgan's to buy a suit of good English tweed before departing to the Great Nature Wilds of Canada. There in the forests, within earshot of the flocks of migrating geese searching for a provident marsh or slough, he communed with the spirit of the birch trees or paddled down some desolate little river in a birch-bark canoe. A broad smile swept the gloom from the ogre's face as he watched Mose Rhymer through his telescope. "This," said he, "is great stuff", and he gave him two columns in Saturday's issue.

But poor little Cinderama! It did not know how to please the ogre. It bought some tweeds, but they slipped off its half-body. It tried to say something witty, but only gibberish came from its half-mouth. It tried to act, but it always lost balance on its single leg. Finally it found a garbage can outside His Majesty's Theatre with the familiar label of Sheet Metal Products, S.M.P., and there it hid itself away from the view of the ogre, who was naturally very much annoyed but couldn't say a darn thing.

Mail Order

This was the second example of Montreal Canadian Drama to strut the local boards last week. The first was Nouveaux Riches, also by a Montrealer, which brings to mind that possibly Toronto is right.

The Guild of the Players of St. Matthias, in their zeal for the advancement of the Canadian Theatre quite forgot one very important factor in successful production; the audience. They should have given us some meagre credit for intelligence. I would suggest to all church dramatic societies that they intrust the selection of a play to someone other than the teacher of the primary class.

What makes it worse, Mr. Morrow the author is a McGill graduate. James McGill, James McGill, strew ashes on thy head!

Mail Order is eminently suited to a child audience, and indeed a large percentage of the audience was composed of children or near-children who responded nobly by laughing at and applauding such brilliant lines as the following:—

If I were a young man I would think twice about getting married

. . . . I asked my old lady to marry me the second time I met her. She never lets me forget that.

. . . . The only way to find out is to open it.

. . . . If you have time to step out in the kitchen I'll show you something that might interest you . . . (Whisper . . whisper.)

Believe it or not, all the above remarks were greeted by gales of glee. I noted them especially. In a word Mail Order is utter and complete tripe, which any organization, except the Trinity Players, should take gingerly between thumb and forefinger and deposit in the furnace.

The Guild of the Players of St. Matthias did well by our Nell, however, and showed that they have something to work on in future. The cast was superior to the play by a long shot. D. K. Buik appeared to advantage in the supposedly comic proposal scene so common to plays which bear the title of Aunt Polly's Rural Romance or Betty's Bashful Bumpkin Beau. Douglass Clarke (spelled with two s's) made a natural enough farmer, while Frances Abbott revealed a real flair for caricature comedy in the brief scene where she prices all the wedding presents from the catalogue. The rest of the players were so-so.

Oh well!

At His Majestys'

"The Whiteheaded Boy"

(By N.A.X.)

"The Whiteheaded Boy" broke through the ordinary reserve of a Monday night audience at the His Majesty's Theatre last night to win the applause that earned five curtain calls for the Abbey Theatre Irish Players. When Lennox Robinson named his play a comedy, he was positively correct, and under his direction the players turned out a comedy,—not that side-splitting exhibition that comes up from below the border,—but an intellectual wit that never made the audience forget that there was also a plot to the play.

From the first to the end, the plot progressed, never hindered by superfluous effort at fun or pseudo-comedy, telling how the pet and intellectual high-light of the family, at least in the maternal eyes of the widowed mother, finally breaks down the illusion that had been set up around him of his possibilities of being the greatest medical expert in Ireland. He had failed to pass his sessional examinations for the third time, and George, the eldest of the family, and controller of the purse-strings finally decides that enough money has been spent on the philandering youth who had failed to appreciate what had been done for him, and that attention should be directed at the girls who are of marriagable age, and who depended on the presence of a large enough dowry to permit them to settle down. Denis, the medical student, is ordered to go to Canada, (the locale is a small town in Ireland) to earn his own way and "to rough it for his own good". He takes it very hard, but finally is convinced. Everything is all right until the father of Delia Duffy, to whom Denis had been engaged for two years, demands a marriage to protect the face of the "Duffy's, and threatens a legal suit for £1000 in default.

The family is in a dilemma, and tries to convince Denis to marry the girl, but he refuses, insisting that he did not want her to feel the hardships in Canada. John Duffy, finally manages to make private settlements on the suit with four different people, and swears each to secrecy. The upshot is that Denis elopes with Delia, and obtains a job as street labourer in the very same town. To prevent a scandal about the matter, John Duffy surrenders the three hundred and twenty pounds he had obtained from the family, and good old Aunt Ellen, provides a job for the youth.

Acting honours go to the whole cast. As an affectionate mother, Eileen Crowe justifies her faith in Denis, (Arthur Shiels). Perfect in pantomime are Maureen Delaney and Barry Fitzgerald who portrayed the roles of the maiden aunt and old John Scruffy, finally to wind up in marriage.

F. J. McCormick is excellently cast as the eldest brother who tries to take the whole family into consideration, while Michael J. Dolan, Joan Sullivan, May Craig, Sheiah and Richard Richards realistically present the dissenting attitudes of the family.

In all, a wonderful comedy, excellently cast, expertly directed, and well presented.

Some of the miners construed this as an insult and retaliated with an expedition which smeared the walls and sidewalks around the Denver Stadium. The Denverites came back and dynamited the Mine's emblem with a blast that rocked the city of the Golden.

CINEMA DE PARIS

The musical comedy "Tout S'Arrange" at the Cinema de Paris has no million dollar ensembles, the costumes are not created by Andre and the leading lady could not have posed for Helen of Troy. And yet despite these Hollywoodian shortcomings it is highly diverting. The plot hinges in great part around the fact that the highly inebriated Monsieur Robert steps into someone else's apartment at 6 a.m., with the usual consequences following such a misstep. However, this ancient theme is enlivened by an intelligent arrangement of these consequences and by the additional circumstance that the said M. Robert and his colleagues, both male and female, display more acting ability than is necessary for the successful reception of custard pies and kitchen utensils.

It is also to the credit of the director and the relief of the spectators that the fair heroine looks more human and less Dresden China than usual. The singing and dancing, I regret having to report, is bad and so are the legs of the chorus, which fortunately appears only once.

There were the usual shorter features with a Krazy Kat comedy on disarmament, which is hereby recommended to the delegates at the forthcoming conference.

the addition of matter. But since the universe is in equilibrium, no more matter can be added to it, so there can be no expansion such as has been observed. In the second there is no matter present, so that if it expands it has nothing to show for it.

Nearly Empty.

Since only one of these can be true, and the universe has matter in it, it has been assumed that it is very nearly empty. If all the matter in the universe were dissociated into electrons and protons, it has been calculated that there will only be about two of these in every cubic foot. In the light of this the universe is very nearly empty.

At present the most generally accepted theory is that the universe is early empty, and that it neither expands nor contracts.

McGill Defeats Victorias, 3-2, In Final Period Rally

Squad Tops Senior Loop By Victory

Collegians' Three Goals Come In Third Period

FARQUHARSON ON JOB FOR OTHERS

Nels Crutchfield Gets Two Assists And Plays Fine Game—Russ Ward Breaks Deadlock

FACING a two goal deficit to Victorias at the start of the third period last night Bobby Bell's red shirts took advantage of the breaks and rammed in three goals to take undisputed leadership in the Q.A.H.A. It was Russ Ward, Dentistry's relief left winger, who broke up the bitter struggle just two minutes before the final bell.

Nels Crutchfield had started a speedy rush that carried him crashing into the Victoria defence, but he shot as he fell, and the puck caromed off White's pad's out to Ward who came in fast, and took it in his stride. He fooled the goalie with a backhand shot to the far side of the net, as the many McGill fans made themselves heard in no uncertain manner.

Farquharson Goes Gunning

Farquharson accounted for the other two McGill tallies. The first came after six minutes of play in that hectic third stanza, when Jack McGill, and the two Murrays of the Maroon squad, were in the cooler. It was Nels Crutchfield again who was the key-man in the successful effort. He obtained posession of the rubber at the defence, and skating beautifully beat the opposing forwards to the Vic defence, which he drew together, and then fed Farquharson a perfect pass. The left winger made no mistake as he sailed in, and planted the puck between White and the nearest post.

Penalties played a big part in the next score, which tied up the game. The redmen were fighting for all they were worth to get the equalizer, and Victorias were hemmed into their own end. Thompson and Smith were sent off for tripping in the excitement, and Carlin was ragging the puck behind the net. Farquharson went right after him, and in the resulting scuffle managed to slip the puck around the post from behind. It was a well deserved tally, and a mighty valuable one.

Paul Smith Gets One

Victorias scored both their goals in the second period, a former captain of a McGill hockey team, Paul Smith, getting the first tally unassisted, as his shot from the red defence found the side of the net. Powers was taken by surprise and was too late getting his pads to it. Ken Murray got the second Maroon counter on a pass from Mullan during a scrimmage around Power's citadel. The McGill goalie has no chance to save.

The game was very fast, and rough; 20 penalties being handed out in all, and 10 of them came in the final period. It was very noticable that the redmen did not have the combination of last Wednesday night, and their efforts were mostly solo. It was this that nearly cost them the game, for otherwise they had the best of the play.

Crutchfield Effective

Nels Crutchfield was again the most effective player on the squad, both on the defence, and on the attack. His two assists were well deserved. Farquharson did not play as brilliantly as usual, although he was in the right place when goals were needed. Jack McGill tried hard, and led some effective rushes Victoria-wards. He was one of the few who tried to pass the puck.

The teams were lined up as follows:

Victorias		McGill
White	goal	Powers
Smith	defence	McGillivray
Carlin	defence	N. Crutchfield
Mullan	centre	Farmer

Second Polo Team Trounces Columbus In Brilliant Display

McGill Seniors Beat Blue Firsts By Two Goals

GAMES GOOD

IT must be that suppers are to the liking of the McGill polo teams, for at the conclusion of their meal at the Knights of Columbus last night, the two Red teams stepped into the water and took the measure of both the Columbus "Blue" teams. The seniors won their game by the score of 5-3, while the juniors administered a crushing defeat to the Knights' juniors, 9-0. The juniors thus scored the first shut-out that any polo squad has recorded this season.

If the results of these games are any criterion the Athletic Board would do well to give the polo ists a supper before every game and so ensure the league championship to the Redmen. At least they should do something in this line before the Varsity game which is to be played on December 5th, for, at their present pace the boys are sure to romp home with the intercollegiate title.

Juniors Play First.

The junior game started the evening as usual, although it was delayed for about a quarter of an hour by the non-arrival of the referee. It was soon evident that the juniors were much superior to the Columbus mermen as the collegians had matters entirely their own way throughout the first half, leaving the water with the score 6-0 in their favour. In the second period they cased up a little and only scored three goals making the final count read 9-0.

It is impossible to pick out any individual star in the junior game. Ripstein deserves great credit for turning in a shutout, but the defence who covered up manfully, share the credit equally with him. The forward line was very good indeed as the score shows, and they all shared in the glory of the great win. The only noticeable weakness in their play was their tendency to shoot the ball from the centre of the pool, which although it resulted in several goals, is not good polo tactics.

Senior Game Closer.

The senior game was very much closer, as the score indicates, and the McGill men had a very close call when Columbus had tied the score with only three minutes to play. However, Mel Doig called for three goals in the remaining time and although only two of them were forthcoming, they were enough to win the game.

The game was a very poor exhibition on the redmen's part; they seemed to have forgotten about covering their men and although two of their opponents' goals were of the fluke variety, coming on decisions by the referee, there was still enough loose work on the team to lose the game for the McGill boys against a little stronger opposition than the Knights afforded. Men seemed to be continually getting away from their checks and swimming down the pool with a good chance to score, and the Redmen had not the slightest idea of looking around to see if there was a man anywhere to pass the ball to. These faults must be eradicated quickly before the Varsity game.

Seniors: Wayland, Payton, Doig, French, Bourne, Davis, Stein.

Juniors: Ripstein, Wilson, Urquhart, Worrall, Shapiro, Shragovitch, McLean.

Frosh-Soph Swimming

The freshman-sophmore swimming meet will be held on Friday at 5:30 p.m. Entries may be made to Manager Russ Payton or by signing the lists posted at the Knights of Columbus pool.

MCGILL UNIVERSITY'S Junior hockey team held its second practice session at the Forum yesterday afternoon. Coach Bobby Bell was on hand to put the candidates through a peppy workout which he topped off with a few minutes of skating. The men are rapidly rounding into form and should be in good shape for their opening encounter with M.A.A.A. next Saturday. The Junior A.H.A. schedule, as issued last week shows that the redmen will play ten games between now and Feb. 27 which gives them only four idle Saturdays until that date, three of them coming in the Christmas Holidays.

Coach Bobby Bell intends to devote himself entirely to the Senior team and is at present considering possibilities for a mentor for the Juniors. No definite information is available as yet but it is certain that Coach Bell will select a capable man for the job.

Another practice will be held today at 1.30 in the Forum and as it may be the last before the opening game, all those interested are asked to be present. The following are especially asked to turn out: McLarin, Lamb, Newton, MacNeil, Duff, Cromble, Johnson, Charlton, and Markham; all others who intend to try out for places on the team should attend.

Aggies Victorious In Slow Soccer Match

Reserves Play Poorly Away From Home

THE Macdonald Soccer team, which is playing for the first time in the Interfaculty loop, decisively defeated the McGill Seconds in a week-end league fixture by a score of 1-0. The game was played amid a strong wind which blew in from the Lake; both teams played a slow and somewhat mediocre game.

Although the score was quite close, the winner's margin of victory should have been several points higher, for the greater part of the tilt was waged deep in the redmen's territory. It was the fine work of Swift and Kelloway that kept the Aggie players from scoring heavily. Had it not been for the play of these two men, the McGill reserves might have suffered greater humiliation.

As it was, the new men on the red roster played far better than many of their more seasoned companions and were constantly offering stern opposition to the Macdonald outfit. Captain Smart, Ross and Janikun appeared greatly off form and their field playing was far below their usual performance.

Following the match, an informal dance was held in the evening.

Major S. Forbes Main Speaker At Swimming Banquet

Queen's University May Enter Swimming Union This Year

ENTHUSIASM EVIDENT

LAST night the swimmers and poloists of Old McGill gathered at the Knights of Columbus for a get-together supper. In other seasons the mermen have had a whole winter of practice and meets before they held their games with Varsity in the spring, but this season the Toronto game occurs within three weeks, and the earliness of the season gives the boys no chance to get acquainted. The purpose of the gathering last night was to enable the players to get to know each other and to inculcate in them some team spirit.

The guest of the evening was Major Stuart Forbes, secretary of the Athletic Board and himself a former McGill athlete. Major Forbes congratulated the swimming club upon the fine turn-out which reflected the interest in swimming in the University. He expressed the opinion that the McGill aquatic squads were always good sportsmen, that their relations with other colleges were always of the best, and that he relied upon the swimming and polo teams to keep the championships that they won last year.

Queen's May Enter Team.

Major Forbes also stated that Queen's University would probably enter the swimming union this year, and that in all probability there would be an intermediate meet held next year in the spring, a week or so after the Varsity-McGill senior meet in Toronto. He claimed that this would afford the younger members of the team a chance to get seasoning in intercollegiate competition before they were called upon to swim in senior company.

Coach Harold Fisk, the other speaker, expressed the hope that the good turnouts would continue throughout the year and that the

Dates And Speakers For Meetings Arranged

The session's first meeting of the English Literature Society will be held in the Arts Building at four p.m. on November 23. The number of the room available at that time will be announced later.

Dr. W. D. Woodhead of the Classics Department is to speak on "Charles Lamb". Dr. Woodhead is a well-known and popular lecturer, and is eminently suited to speak on this topic, having attended the same college, Christ's Hospital, as Lamb, and having always taken a particular interest in him. There will be a short discussion following the address. These discussions are informal and touch on some of the aspects of literature with which college courses do not deal. The topic on this occasion should be of interest to many, it is claimed, since Charles Lamb is one of the finest essayists and literary critics in English literature, and has won many readers "by his refined and delicate humor, his genuine and cordial pleasantry, and his heart-touching pathos".

The meetings of the Society are open to all students who are interested in English literature. Those who are honoring in English are automatically members of the Society but any others who so desire may join, simply by requesting that their names be enrolled.

Disarmament And Hypocrisy

Editor, McGill Daily,
Dear Sir;

A typical Canadian form of United States Ballyhoo has gone the rounds. The students, supported, I understand, by Sir Arthur Currie, were asked to sign a petition in favour of disarmament. The fate of this petition was reported in the Daily simultaneously with the report of the activities of the University O.T.C. in the Laurentians—although what in heaven's name a University (seat of learning) has got to do with running an O.T.C. I have never yet understood. (Unless it can conceivably be that the Beauharnoisio fear that they cannot survive upon their own reputations).

But these little prancings are completely secondary to the fact that during the last month we have watched the Japanese, the Yellow Peril, etc., occupy Manchuria and the League make a more handsome fool of itself than it has ever done before while ENGLAND, FRANCE and the U.S.A. have not voiced a word of protest. Even those not in sympathy with Russia should surely admit that this is a form of hypocrisy far exceeding the repeatedly despised (so-called) pre-war diplomacy. With no sources of external information it appears to me that the powers that rule the world have approved the Japanese going in and gaining control of Manchuria during the few remaining years that the going is good. And to talk of disarmament while this is going on is, as I have said, common hypocrisy.

In the face of these conditions there are certain steps which are urgently necessary:

(a) Abandon the League.

(c) The educated to instruct the masses as to the folly of nationalism.

(d) The educated to see that the uneducated are at least educated to the point where they will decline by mass action to destroy each other and the natural wealth of the world in brutality, militarism and lice.

In these sentiments, Mr. Editor, I have been carefully coached by the wicked Communists who have recently been sentenced in the Queen City of the Dominion, Toronto.

Sincerely,
Hilary A. Belloc.

Freshettes Again Hear Dr. Simpson

Function Of Glands Described In Address

Continuing his series of hygiene lectures Dr. J. C. Simpson yesterday addressed the freshettes at R.V.C. The speaker likened the human body to a telephone system in which there are the constant calls and the emergency. In the boys these are represented by the several systems including the endocrine and second by the nervous system.

The endocrine or ductless gland system is constantly at work and is not under control of the will. They pour their secretions into the blood and are transported through it to all parts of the body. The thyroid gland is important in its influence upon growth and development of the individual. Normal people stop growing between the ages of 18-25, those who have a too great abundance of the secretions of the petuitary gland continue growing indefinately.

The nervous system has its centre in the brain and spinal cord. From these, nerves reach out to every part of the skin. There are two types of nerves—those that receive the impulses, called receptors, and those that send the message to the brain where they are interpreted and then sent to the muscles of glands to produce movement of secretions, these are the effectors.
